The American Immigration Council is a non-profit, non-partisan, organization based in Washington D.C. Our legal, education, policy and exchange programs work to strengthen America by honoring our immigrant history and shaping how Americans think and act towards immigration now and in the future. The international exchange programs are designated by the U.S. Department of States to sponsor trainees and interns on the J-1 visa. The American Immigration Council assumes a number of duties and responsibilities in the J-1 visa process, and is committed to the success of every international intern or training program.

The American Immigration Council produces training webinars, practice advisories, professional articles, and other aids to facilitate the understanding and practice of citizens' exchange.

The exchange staff administers highly personal programs, committed to each exchange visitor having the most success experience possible in the United States. Exchange Visitors and U.S. Host companies have access to the education, policy, and legal work of the American Immigration Council, as well as the weekly communications from the exchange staff. The U.S. Mexico relationship as it impacts trade, civil rights, and popular opinion in both countries is a priority focus for our current strategic planning. The exchange of interns between the two countries, especially in the areas of journalism, law, social sciences, and entrepreneurship is a social change tool for improving the joint understanding of the issues facing the continent we share.

In addition, the American Immigration Council arranges short-term study tours overseas for groups interested in immigration and human rights issues. Participating in international training is people-to-people diplomacy that creates positive ties with other parts of the world.

Pan Atlantic Exchanges

In 1984 Victoria Murphy, who had worked in both the Johnson and Carter White Houses, founded Pan Atlantic Exchanges with the vision of advancing the diplomatic mission of the United States by introducing foreign university graduates and midcareer professionals to the culture and business traditions in the US. Over 30 years later, the organization continues to serve this mission.

Pan Atlantic is a mid-sized J-1 Visa Sponsor, specializing in serving the training needs of recent university graduates and mid-career professionals. Designated as a sponsor in the Intern and Trainee categories, the organization is known for its personalized service and attention to detail.

As a mid-sized J-1 Visa Sponsor, Pan Atlantic is flexible enough to work with a wide variety of foreign institutions (e.g. Universities), Host Organizations (e.g. US or Mexican Corporations) and individual candidates for J-1 Visas. Our experience ranges from serving large corporate clients such as Marriott to smaller host organizations with specialized research needs such as Kentucky Equine Research. In addition, we are able to help foreign universities develop tools and programs to empower graduating students develop and secure their own internships directly with US host organizations.

Across all of these internship modalities is the Pan Atlantic commitment to creating positive experiences for our exchange visitors – both in the professional sphere, but also in developing a clear, realistic understanding of modern life in the US. Located in scenic Portland, Maine, Pan Atlantic is part of a burgeoning hub of organizations specializing in International Exchange.

The Ohio Program

A. HISTORY

The Ohio Program (herein referred to as TOP) is a foreign and domestic international student/ non-student exchange sponsored by the College of Food, Agricultural & Environmental Sciences, under the direction of the Office of International Programs in Agriculture at The Ohio State University. The Ohio State University was established in 1879 as the Land Grant institution of Ohio and has an enrollment of 61,000, making it one of the largest universities in the United States.

The program was initiated in 1979 to meet the need of the College's students to receive not only practical work training relevant to their major fields of study, but, moreover, to receive that training in an International setting.

The program would be identified as an Exchange Visitor Program with the following official description:

"A program of The Ohio State University to provide, on a reciprocal basis, opportunities for study and on-the-job training for specially selected foreign and American agricultural students, to promote the general interest of Trainee/International exchange in the field of agriculture."

In addition to student experience, general objectives are to increase mutual understanding between the people of the United States and the people of other countries and to assist in the development of friendly, sympathetic and peaceful relations between the United States and other nations.

B. ADMINISTRATION

The Ohio Program is administered under provisions set in accordance with the administrative regulations issued under the Mutual Educational and Cultural Exchange Act of 1961 (PL 87-256), Fulbright-Hays Act. Program policy is established by the Office of International Programs in Agriculture at The Ohio State University. This program is an evolution of several smaller exchange programs conducted informally for many years by The Ohio State University on behalf of the students, faculty, and foreign nationals seeking training. The policy for this program is expected to change in response to the needs of students, host families/businesses and the College. Special cooperation is received from county extension personnel and faculty of various departments within the College.

CAEP (Communicating for Agriculture Education Programs)

Our Organization

Communicating for Agriculture and our program CAEP, (caep.org and communicatingforamerica.org) is the largest and oldest Agriculture Training Program registered with the U.S. Department of State as a J1 sponsor. We have completed over 43,000 successful trainee and internship placements in the last 37 years from over 42 countries.

Our Value

We are not Work and Travel! CAEP is not about travel for your students and a chance for them to earn money on their summer break. This is a program about professional development and the opportunity to validate the learning they have received from your institution in a structured training program. Your students will expand their understanding of different cultures, practice their skills in Agriculture through tutorship by owners and operators of Agriculture businesses, and begin to build their CV and work experience in the chosen field of Agriculture. They will come home with reference letters by employers, validated online skills sign-off by their hosts on their training plan, receive optional continuing education credits offered by our higher education partners, and receive a certificate of program completion from CAEP. You will be able to monitor their progress while on their program through our online skills validation tracking software and even add additional coursework for them to complete.

Our hosts

Our hosts are the members of our Agriculture Organization, Communicating for Agriculture. There are 106,000 Agriculture members of CA who work with our organization to promote rural advocacy in The U.S., Canada, Australia, and New Zealand. # About Global Ties U.S.

When business, nonprofit, government, and academic leaders from around the world connect with their counterparts in the U.S. through international exchange programs, the relationships they forge become a powerful tool for addressing some of our biggest global challenges.

For over 50 years, Global Ties U.S. has been making these kinds of connections possible. As a nonprofit partner of the U.S. Department of State, we sustain a network that coordinates international exchange programs and brings current and future leaders from around the world to communities throughout the United States. We provide our members—from large, national organizations to smaller, community-based ones across 45 states and 14 countries—with connections, leadership development, and professional resources, so that they are the strongest, most effective organizations they can be.

The leaders who participate in international exchanges—and the communities that host them—benefit from greater knowledge, further understanding, and deeper relationships. These shared experiences result in stronger local communities and a more peaceful, prosperous world.
